One of the great performances of Wagner's first major music-drama has only been available in highly fragmented form. Our restoration is virtually complete, with only the Senta-Erik scene in Act II missing. Reconstruction of this performance, keeping Weber as Daland, required the introduction of 16 minutes in Act I from a 1936 performance and one and a half minutes in Act III. All else is conducted by Reiner. Now, for the first time, the memorable singing of these renowned vocal artists can be heard in sustained musical and dramatic continuity and in good sound as well.
